PARTICIPANTS' IMPRESSIONS

"The MACS programme at IACA has been an absolute game-changer for me. The content is rich and the in-class analysis is in depth and apt for anti-corruption crusaders everywhere."

Alhassan Kargbo, Public Relations Officer, Anti-Corruption Commission, Sierra Leone

"Participants from the corporate sector can benefit from the knowledge and skills gained through the MACS programme that can help them craft more effective compliance policies and trainings, and handle internal compliance investigations more skillfully to better contribute to the overall fight against corruption."

Archana Shastri, Integrity & Compliance Officer-Asia, MTU Asia, Singapore

"Completing graduate studies in the same area as my work will enhance my use of development tools to fight corruption. Since starting my studies at IACA, I have come to know many people of different nationalities and specializations. This has contributed to the exchange of information, views, and experiences, enhanced my knowledge, and opened up other possible cooperation aspects".

Mohammed Alabsi, Head of Anti-Corruption Department, Ministry of Interior, Kingdom of Bahrain

"I really feel that the MACS experience can help me make a difference in my work, especially by thinking outside the box and proposing new approaches to typical Brazilian corruption problems, based on theories to which we are exposed during the course and that are discussed in the classroom among experts from all over the world."

Rogerio Vieira dos Reis, Principal Coordinator-Audit, Development, Industry and Foreign Trade, Office of the Comptroller General, Brazil

"Because of the specific spectrum of knowledge made available to participants, the MACS is an opportunity to incubate innovative thinking. The programme also gives access to a unique worldwide network of experts via IACA's alumni".

Malika Ait-Mohamed Parent, Under-Secretary General, International Federation of the Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies, Switzerland
